Abstract

72 155

The figure consists of two side-by-side line graphs. Both graphs have 'Rate of reaction' on the vertical y-axis and 'Temperature (°C)' on the horizontal x-axis. The x-axis is marked with 10, 20, 30, and 40. The left graph shows a single curve that starts at a low rate at 10°C, rises to a peak at 30°C, and then begins to decline at 40°C. The right graph shows two curves. The first curve is identical to the one in the left graph, peaking at 30°C. The second curve starts at a higher rate than the first at 10°C, reaches a higher peak than the first curve at 40°C, and then declines.

This image is a high-contrast, black-and-white scan of a document page that has been severely degraded. The page is characterized by numerous horizontal lines and large, dark, irregular shapes that appear to be redactions or significant damage to the original text. The overall appearance is noisy and lacks the clarity of a standard document scan, making the content almost entirely illegible.
